Hye Notes

Ed Tefankjian, President

The first Newcomer's Social for 2008 was held at Round Table Pizza and there was an excellent mix of new and old members.....based on the feed-back, it looks like there are new members that will be very active in LPR.

April is the beginning of Spring and the LPR "events" calendar is full of fun activities, check the POST for the details.

Like most social clubs LPR is an all volunteer organization and if you haven't already attended a "Board Meeting" (typically held on the first Thursday of the month) I would recommend that you attend to see how your club is run. Also, there may be some board or committee positions that you may be interested in.....new members bring new ideas.

Hope to see you soon at one of the LPR events.

You too can enjoy your own Costa Rican adventure!

Casa Orquidea is available for weekly rentals. Located inside Hacienda Pinilla, home to JW Marriott's new 5 star resort (opening in Dec 08). Golf, surfing, horseback riding & much more!
Sleeps 8 in luxury surroundings.

Kevin Bennett, Editor

Debbie told me that she recently heard Wayne Rogers (Trapper John from the M*A*S*H television show, now a financial analyst on Fox) participate in a debate on the state of the U.S. economy. Rogers asserted that the current housing crisis, wherein tens of thousands of property owners are losing their homes to foreclosure, is not the “tragedy” that is being played up by the news media and pandered to by the politicians, but is rather merely the result of people being allowed to purchase homes who could simply not afford them. He further ventured that the housing market is merely undergoing a correction, creating a “false recession” and that he felt that a full blown recession is not in the cards.

Having been an independent businessman and a financial conservative, I have to admit that I admire Rogers immensely. He is one of the few actors who briefly hit it big and, unlike his peers, while the big money was rolling in, rather than living large, he invested it. He was so successful at handling his own finances that he was solicited by others in the industry to manage their money, hence his abrupt disappearance from the stage.

As a conservative, it’s easy to readily identify with Roger’s analysis and dismiss the plight of the ousted homeowners. I certainly don’t agree with the notion that the taxpayer should be funding any bailout based on the potential travails of these economically stressed individuals, but then that philosophy falls right in line with Marie Antoinette’s fabled line in response to being told that the masses had no bread, to wit, “Let them eat cake.”

I used to have no sympathy for people who got themselves into financial trouble; after all, a modest amount of discipline is all that is needed to stay out of trouble. The problem is that in a capitalist republic like ours, it is the individual vs. the corporate world, and that world is a huge, varied and, yes, dangerous jungle. It is filled with savage packs of MBAs and PhDs, working for gargantuan financial juggernauts, dreaming up new schemes to separate the herd from its money. Easy credit has for many years been one of the most profitable means of extracting coin from the masses. Spend, spend, spend is the message. Borrow for that dream vacation! Take a second on your house to remodel or take that dream vacation! Buy a timeshare on credit so you can take that dream vacation every year! Pre-approved credit offers became so prevalent that an entire criminal movement was born, culling these offers from mail boxes. A more recent exploitation is pushing high interest credit cards on hard partying, hard drinking and unthinking college students during spring break.

One of the results of all this easy credit was a booming bankruptcy business. But, lo, the banks also paid lobbyists, and these faithful toadies managed to get The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 passed which greatly diminished the consumers' ability to walk away from their debts through bankruptcy. A conservative might feel that this is a good thing, but it is creating an ever tightening noose around the neck of the consuming public while relaxing what little constraint the credit industry had over its ever voracious appetite for the profits derived from dispensing easy credit.

And what training do we give our children to survive in this financial wild? If they're lucky, they might endure a lesson or two in high school about how to balance a checkbook. Knowledge is a powerful thing and, as a consumer, it strikes me as unbalanced that all of the power seems to be on the side of the PhDs and the MBAs in this unceasing financial contest.

I once made an inquiry of a high school principal about giving some practical lessons to students about how to effectively handle their financial affairs. I even offered to create a lesson plan and even teach the class. I felt that one week of one hour classes could easily offer lessons on why it's not rude to say no to a salesman; how to find the dealer's cost of a new car; how to negotiate the purchase of same; methods of creating a painless savings program; the benefits of paying cash versus credit cards; the benefits of investing versus spending. The principal's response was unenthusiastic and uninterested.

I am not the type to believe in conspiracies, but it seems to me that the big banks must have somehow worked their magical influence on the school system to deprive the students of these simple and empowering lessons, and on that basis, I am beginning to lose my easy identification with business versus the over-extended consumer.

Rogers is certainly right that the folks losing their homes really couldn't afford them. But the big boys told these people that they could, and I'm beginning to think that that should count for something; if nothing else, the rethinking of the regulatory constraints placed on all of the financial behemoths looking for ever more ways to milk the consumer for a lot more money.

Hal & Diana Hallock present

A One Day Vacation in Boulder Creek Saturday. April 5th

Grab your golf clubs, your tennis racket, your walking shoes, your tasting glass, your swimsuit, your hiking boots, or a great book. Saturday April 5th has something for everyone!

The day begins with a golf tournament through the redwoods at the Boulder Creek Golf & Country Club, weekend home of Hal and Diana Hallock. Golfers will meet at the Hallock's at 10:00am sharp for coffee and a breakfast snack before a day on the course.

Not a golfer? There are lots of options while your sweetie is on the course...

- Explore the tiny funky town of Boulder Creek (3 miles)
- Take a hike through the redwoods in Big Basin Park (3 miles)
- Play tennis on one of six tournament courts
- Swim in the pool or explore the rocky creek
- Visit a local winery; David Bruce, Byington and Ahlgren (10 miles)
- Doze by the creek and enjoy a good book
- Play croquet by the pool

Golfers check-in at Hallock's 10:00 a.m.

The party begins 2:30 p.m.

- RSVP
1. Golfers send $50 check to Lowell Hallock by March 15th (18 holes w/ cart) Make check to BCGCC (Boulder Creek Golf & Country Club)
 2. Just coming for the fun and BBQ? Plan on bringing a salad, dessert, or appetizer to share and call or email Hal by April 1st

MEMBER NOTES

Les Schreiber, Membership Director

We had a great Newcomers Social on February 22nd at Round Table Pizza, and if you didn't get a chance to attend, we will have another one September 12th. But you are always welcome at any of the events scheduled for the year, or drop in at our board meeting (1st Thursday of the month 7:00PM Round Table Pizza- Camden & Union)

James Quinn and I did a dry run the other day for the Mother's Day Brunch location, and I think we have a great route planned for the beginning of the tour/brunch at the Bargetto Winery.

The people at the Bargetto Winery, in Soquel, are planning their menu - so keep that date open, May 11th for Brunch, Wine and at least a very enjoyable afternoon with your Porsche club friends.

A little history on the Bargetto Winery, which began with brothers Phillip and John Bargetto who emigrated from Castelnuovo Don Bosco, a small town in the Piedmont region of northern Italy. They brought with them many years of winegrowing experience when they established Bargetto Winery in 1933 on the banks of Soquel Creek in the Santa Cruz Mountains. Today they are operated by the third generation Bargetto's who have continued the commitment of their forefathers to produce wines of quality.

I would like to welcome the newcomers who have registered with PCA National this month, as we always enjoy seeing them at our events.

IT'S SOUP NIGHT!

by Margot Novak

What better way to celebrate President's Day weekend on a crisp winter evening than by immersion into the warmth of the comfortable surroundings of Bill and Lorraine Glathe's home, filled with LPR friends of long-standing, as well as getting acquainted with newer members. This traditional visit for us to taste the many flavors of home-made soups and salads is a great way to start the year!

When we arrived with Reg and Jean Ricket, our former Saratoga neighbors, we were pleased to see the newlywed's, John and Angie Reed, as well as Rudi and Joanna Herz, Ken and June Iles and Carole and Larry Goodwin who were all LPR stalwarts when we transferred into the region back in the late '70's. Much of the crowd was gathered in the kitchen around the island where the wonderful hors d'oeuvres were on display. The Goodwin's provided a tasty assortment of cheeses, the Highley's brought cranberry chicken, and the Herz's brought crab dip.

Ed Tefankjian makes the presentation of LPR's traditional thank you gift to host & hostess Bill & Lorraine Glathe. May your soup reign never end!

As we split up and circulated we saw faithful POST editor, Kevin Bennett with his enforcer, Debbie, who asked me to write up the event. (I'm always glad to make a contribution.) Debbie introduced me to new member Bonnie Radding. When I met her husband, Herb, we had a good chat about our older Porsches. The Radding's daughter, Lisa, and her date, Scott Harris provided some exotic beer. Pete and I were happy to see the ace 356 tech-man, Ralph Maines still going strong. He came with Jeannie Murrell and his favorite sushi.

The sumptuous soups that were offered included split pea soup by the Raddings; mushroom soup by Steve Crane and Jeff Tucker; butternut soup by Ed and Karen Tefankjian; lima bean and ham soup by Jim and Diane Cox; southwest soup by our hostess, Lorraine, and clam chowder by John and Angie Reed. An informal poll showed that there were many favorites, though the clam chowder disappeared first. Barry and Suzette Pangrle provided some delectable corn bread to go with this splendid assortment.

"Well of course she'd make a great president. Look at all of the executive experience she has..." Joe Pruss, Dick Wallace, Bob Morgan and Gary Lieber.

As a counterpoint there were two types of pea salad, a chicken and wild rice salad and two tossed greens salads. Our brand new members, Randy and Patsy Paul, attending their first event, brought a blackberry and blue cheese salad.

It looks as if someone announced that the editor is going to start limiting his column to club and Porsche related subjects.

Of course there were a variety of yummy deserts to round out the evening for the 45 attendees for this event.

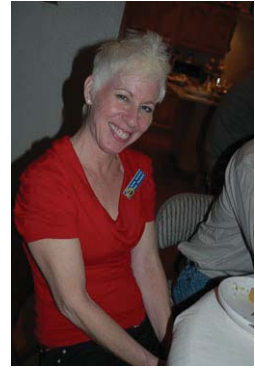

President Ed ran a short business meeting and made the presentation of handmade chocolates, nuts and wine to the Glathe's for hosting the event. This was followed by a hardy round of applause by satisfied diners.

With the Joe Pruss sales push of LPR Calendar's, a bonus for me attending the event was I now have a convenient way to keep current on up-coming events.

As we were leaving we passed late-arriving Tom and Sandy Provasi. Sandy requested Pete write up the event in verse, as he has done a few times in the past. Sorry, Sandy, your wish will be fulfilled another day.

Bob Morgan, Cheryl Pruss and Angie Reed.

Below: I'd put the combined over/under figure for tenure in LPR at 100 years for these three. Larry Goodwin, Tom Provasi and Bill Glathe.

Every year, someone sits on these stairs and eats their soup, and every time they look sort of forlorn... this time it's Barry & Suzette Pangrle.

So, how much soup do you think it's gonna take?

Above: Bob Morgan is so easily pleased. Give him a bowl of soup and a calendar and he's good to go!

Friday, February 22nd, saw Loma Prieta Region's first Newcomer Social for 2008, and it turned out to be a very entertaining evening. Many newcomers attended this "Let's Get Acquainted Gathering" at the Round Table Pizza just off Camden Ave, which is also the new site of our monthly board meetings.

As at any social gathering with people you have never met before, it is not easy to remember everyone's names afterwards, so you'll have to forgive any omissions or mix-ups here. The "Hello, My Name Is" stick-on labels were a great help at the time though.

kitchen and won't move even if urged to do so. Strange that, isn't it, - wonder why that is? But I digress.

One of the first new couples arriving were Richard and Wava Zorker, and they were quickly followed by Stuart and Caroline Marshall with their son Mike. Keven and Allison Homewood were there also, as was Ted and Nancy Fischer, Bonnie and Herb Radding, along with Scott Harris and Lisa Radding too. There were Even Membership Director Les Schreiber had difficulty talking to everyone personally, for there were so many people gathered around the newcomers table and didn't seem to want to move away. Same at the beer and pizza table. I guess it's one of those things that seems to happen at all social parties where everyone seems to gather in the also several people there that had attended only one or two events before, and so were still considered newcomers. Of course, everyone expressed “social” as their main interest, with competition driving in one form or another being high on their interest list too.

Apart from the friendliness usually associated with our region, the free pizza and free beer undoubtedly helped to promote a party-like atmosphere, augmented further with wine for some from the adjacent bar. Prez

Ed Tefankjian officiated, along with Membership Director Les Schreiber, and everyone the was asked to introduce themselves one by one around the room, and tell a little about themselves and their Porsche(s). One of the highlights of the evening was Suzette Pangrle's input. Normally known to be extremely quiet, teetotal and reserved, Suzette had everyone wondering what kind of a buzz she had on, for her description of her car was hilarious and decidedly untechnical. With wildly flailing and gyrating arms, she loudly and most enthusiastically described the car as having a long thing at the front, and something on the back that was this high, and rounded stuff on the front and elsewhere. At least I think that was what she was saying, the room was just so full of shrieks of laughter it was hard to hear it all, but I'm sure I heard someone say “I’ll have what she’s having”. Not surprisingly, hubby Barry with mouth agape had a bewildered look of incredulity on his face.

Another laugh came from newcomer Stewart Marshall. an Englishman, who on introducing himself said “I expect you can tell from my accent that I’m from Los Gatos” His wife Carolyn had an equally “fish & chips” accent with which I readily identify. Oohs and aahs were heard when another newcomer, Herb Radding mentioned his long racing experience and driving at 200 mph, and good natured boos were heard when Nancy Fischer said she drove a BMW, but with uncanny insight at recognizing a faux-pas, she extricated herself to cheers when she quickly added that she was a connoisseur of wine.

*The trip’s all planned... had a little beer, a little pizza...
Don Schmidek and James Quinn are happy campers.*

These twice a year newcomer social get-togethers are in themselves becoming another one of Loma Prieta’s “good times”. And do these new people attending appear to be future good timers too? You bet!
