PRESIDENT'S LETTER

This month you will receive the 2014 election ballot. If you do not receive the ballot by mail, you can access the ballot online via our LPR website. Please take the time to vote and mail your ballot. Ballots must be received by October 31, 2013.

You will be voting for the 2014 LPR Board Members. On this ballot you will also be voting for the most popular activities such as tours and good time gatherings. You will also be able to vote for the persons deserving recognition for their contributions this year. The following is a brief description of the history and merits of the awards name in honor of past and present LPR members.

The first such award is "The Ken Iles Competition Driving Award".

This was conceived by the Board of Directors nearly 30 years ago as a permanent tribute to Ken who, as a charter member with a passion to get LPR on the map, was largely responsible for the club's early direction and fun philosophy which led to the distinct LPR honor of "Region of the Year" in only its second year of formation. Ken coined the phrase "The Good Time Region," participated enthusiastically in every activity, particularly in autocrossing and encouragement of the sport. The award is given to anyone who demonstrates similar competition driving enthusiasm and marked improvement in performance.

The second honorary award is "The Harry Reed Memorial Award".

Harry was the father of John Reed, and although not a member of PCA at all, he nevertheless attended practically every event and was so very enthusiastic and helpful in every way. The club sadly missed Harry's presence and help after he died some 20 years ago, and decided to posthumously honor him with a memorial award bearing his name. The award is given to anyone in LPR deemed to have demonstrated similar dedication and effort to that of Harry Reed.

The Reed family enthusiastic activity was shared by Kathy Reed, who was a well loved LPR figure, attending practically every event with so much enthusiasm and vigor for nearly 30 years. Fun loving, with a terrific sense of humor, Kathy was always at the core of any activity and extremely popular.

Sadly, the club was struck another blow when Kathy died, and as a permanent reminder of her the club named the Woman of the Year trophy as the “Kathy Reed Memorial Award” for Woman of the Year winner.

Another posthumous award was the “Jim Kershaw Tour of the Year Award”. Jim was a charismatic charter member, and also very instrumental in the development of LPR’s early direction. Extremely social, fun loving, a party goer, very popular, an enthusiastic autocrosser, rallyist, and above all a tour lover. The loss of Jim was yet another blow for our club, but his name lives on with the award bearing his name, which is given for the Tour of the Year.

On another issue, the club has setup a committee to determine how best to assemble and issue a LPR Directory of Membership. Our biggest concern is how to best respect the privacy of any member not wishing to have their contact information available to everyone. The details will be worked out by the committee and more information will be forthcoming.

Your President,
Vince Vincent

Kill-a-Cone for Autism

LPR autocrossers who typically try to avoid hitting cones raised $1,122 at the August 25th autocross by not only paying $1 per cone hit on the course but by also making a generous contribution at the 2nd annual “Kill-a-Cone for Autism” event for the Morgan Autism Center. Morgan Autism Center was looking for a sponsor to fund the purchase of new vests for the school in the amount of $1,500 and the LPR Board voted to make up the difference to make the donation total $1,500.

President Vince Vincent presents LPR's contribution of $1,500 to Brad Boardman, Executive Director of the Morgan Autism Center and proud LPR member with Larry Sharp holding MAC client drawing of our favorite AutoCross Chair with Kris and Tony Vanacore and Dave Dunwoodie.

Creating Opportunities For Success

September 4, 2013

Dear LPR:

On August 25 I had an opportunity to see firsthand why PCA often reminds us all that "It's not just the cars, it's the people." Autocross co-chairs, Larry Sharp and Anne Roth (with the help and good ideas of an ensemble cast) turned our autocross into a Kill a Cone for Autism fundraiser benefitting Morgan Autism Center.

Morgan Autism Center is a school and adult day program serving individuals from all over the bay area. It is a nonprofit, and must fundraise in order to meet the support needs of students and clients. Though MAC is a small school, it is a thought leader and community resource for education and training in the field of Autism.

For every cone hit, autocrossers were encouraged to donate a dollar to Morgan Autism Center. Despite course designer Larry Sharp's best efforts (extra clusters of cones strategically placed), only 31 cones were hit: surely a testament to the driving skills of all present. Despite the low cone count, more than eleven hundred dollars was generated on the day with more donations trickling in since. Once the LPR Board of Directors heard about the event and Morgan Autism Center's needs, they got into the act, making for a total donation of over 1500.00 dollars! These dollars will be spent on neoprene vests for students with sensory issues. These vests are worn periodically throughout the day and are a part of a "sensory diet" designed to give individuals sensory input and help them to self-regulate, increasing their ability to receive instruction.

When I joined PCA a few years ago, I thought of my need to go out and drive cars like a madman as being a little selfish. But what I see and experience with LPR and its members shows me a different truth. LPR members are engaged, caring, and generous and they have a selfish need to drive like maniacs! Thanks LPR for supporting Morgan Autism Center. It really is about the people.

PS- It is difficult to thank the entire cast of contributors without unintentionally missing someone. But we know who you are, and we'll see ya in Marina!

Sincerely,

Brad Boardman
Executive Director, Morgan Autism Center
Proud LPR Member

Crikey! That's the first word that came to mind when I saw the start point of this tour. San Juan Bautista? Egad, that place was the final destination of our last tour. So this tour of Kathy Musser virtually has a pre-tour for most of us, just to get to the start? Ah well, I have confidence in Kathy, she's a great gal and knows what she's doing, and quite used to thousands of miles traveling in her previous airline career. So, undaunted, and dismissing any ideas of extra gas drop tanks for the long pilgrimage, June and I sallied forth to meet up with another forty or so people at the start. But not before I had checked my CB radio, only to find I could transmit but not receive. That's bad news. It means I can't give Big John as good as he gives me, and single digit hand signals are so limited in scope, however meaningful.

We arrived early at The Windmill Market meeting place and parked alongside a Porsche sporting an LPR badge that was glaringly mounted askew. (No names please, since discretion is the better part of valor.) The weather was already pretty warm, and we went inside to meet others taking advantage of the air-conditioned market. In fact, when the crowd became too large assembling inside near the entrance, a lady staffer came up and herded us away, muttering something about a fire marshall. Many of us commiserated with Christina Vincent who after spending countless hours and gobs of money on her first Porsche had the engine seize up. She rode with Vince. We also noted that Les Schreiber always manages to get good-lookin' women to ride with him. What's your secret Les?

Among the crowd there too numerous to name here individually were co-tour leaders Tony and Kris Vanacore who led the first group. Kris unfortunately had a swollen face from a recent fall, but she still looked good, and was her usual charming self.

After signing release forms, paying the $5 car fee and many greetings and introductions, a short drivers' meeting which included tall drivers too, was held outside. Route instructions were issued to all, very well prepared by Johnny Musser reflecting the excellent quality of his financial reports at Board meetings.

After zeroing our odometers we started off in two separate groups, the first leaving at about 1:00 p.m., with Group 2 starting out 20 minutes later. The route took us through miles of light brown colored grassy hills and valleys much of it on Hwy. 25, then through King City, Greenfield, and across an interesting one lane bridge across a dry river bed, appropriately called Arroyo Seco. Fortunately nobody was coming in the opposite direction. At 87 miles on the odo. we turned into Sycamore Cellars to meet up with Group 1 already chomping on snacks and tasting wine. Having been to this winery previously, I just had to buy another bottle of their excellent Port, - it goes so well with dark chocolate. And some Syrah too. They have good stuff there. A small music group was being set up to play, but at 4.30 p.m. we had to leave to get to our next destination according to schedule, but not before giving a cheer to Greg and Sue Sickal who joined us at this venue, and a cheer to newcomers Ephren and Cindy Casamina who had decide to stay with LPR rather than their intended move to San Diego. That's a smart move in itself guys.

We all re-zeroed our odos, again per instructions, and after another 38 miles or so finally arrived at Baja Cantina on the Carmel Valley Road at about 5:45 p.m. Fortunately the temperature had cooled down from the 104 degrees we had endured for most of the tour. This restaurant was a fairly big place, and with a whole room full of tired drivers telling embroidered stories of their own exploits en route, it was pretty noisy. Such is LPR always having a good time, for which we are justifiably famous.

Getting the crowd quiet for announcements was characteristically not an easy task, but Hal and Diana Hallock did manage to promote their upcoming Black and White event. President Vince Vincent thanked Kathy and Johnny Musser for a great tour, with much applause from the crowd in appreciation. Vince also announced several upcoming events also, including remembering to vote for the 2014 Board members on the ballot, and naming each one of the contenders. Since he himself is running for a second term after doing an outstanding job this year, many were happy to endorse him with rousing cheers.

Jackie Mitchell along with Sue and Greg Sickal manage to stay upbeat while awaiting their meals' arrival.

Saturdaes at the Races

By Kevin Bennett

Photos: John Reed

Saturday, August 17th, was race day at the home of Bill and Emilie Highley. When Debbie and I arrived a few minutes early, we found that there were already half-a-dozen couples in attendance. My arrival immediately turned into the tablet computer hour as Bill had a couple of HP Touchpads up and partially working; to which we had wanted to make some operating system modifications. After fiddling with them and getting nowhere, Ken Iles asked me to consult on a problem with his Ipad, which he just happened to have with him. I spun my wheels on that for ten minutes or so, then finally gave up on nerd stuff and decided to participate in the nascent festivities.

Jim Bryant proves that old Nike adage; “Nothing brings out the testosterone like the proper footwear.

The Highleys had the backyard set up with a bar and five or six tables to accommodate the scheduled forty or so Good-Timers due to arrive on this extremely pleasant, summer evening. Folks were already drinking wine, noshing on appetizers and were busily reacquainting themselves with people whom they had not seen for a period of weeks! I joined an enclave of males gathered at the bar, presided over by our host, Mr. Highley, and we talked about the usual manly stuff. I was actually able to participate in some car talk, as I had recently ordered a new after-market AC kit for Gunner, and the guys were all over me with offers of advice, help and even some interest in perhaps updating their own vehicle’s air conditioning. One of the great things about gathering at the bar is that the bar serves as a magnet, drawing ladies with empty glasses and permitting some banter with another gender, thus engendering some pleasant face time with Rena Schaut and Jen Bryant, among others.

Race Chairman Emilie Highley announced that the relay race competition was imminent and that she needed two teams comprised of eight athletes in each. Steve Mitchell was standing next to me and I proposed to him that we form a team (I figured that it would be advantageous to have an attorney on the team in case of rules disputes). We announced the need for six more racers and within seconds had a complete team. We reported to the track (the Highley's driveway) where we quickly appointed Steve to be the team captain and agreed to the team's awesome name, "Team Olympus". The awesomely named team was composed of four men and four women, thus conforming to the mandates of NCAA's Title nine. The opposing team was clearly discriminatory in having eight women as competitors and they're team, apparently, didn't even have a name, let alone an awesome one.

The team captains were introduced to RC Emilie, who then walked the teams through the race's five challenges: 1) toss a ball into a bucket, 2) assemble a nine-piece puzzle, 3) drink half of the volume of a baby bottle through a very narrow curly straw, 4) roll six dice until one number showed on all six, and finally 5) run back to the starting line holding a ball between your knees. Oh, and did I mention that the competitors had to do all this while wearing huge inflatable clown feet? Oh, the cruelty!

The team with no name is shod and ready for the race.

RC Emilie started the race, which was conducted with much cheering and enthusiasm from the team members as well as their numerous fans. Race officials were placed at every competition station to enforce the rules and facilitate the completion of the specific challenge in a fair manner. It was a dead heat for about the first four contestants and then the team with the awesome name began to pull away into a definite lead. In the end it was a runaway victory by Team Olympus and the awesomeness of the win is sure to go down as a seminal moment in the history of relay races and sports in general. The winning team members each received a gift card to Baskin Robbins while the less-victorious, less-awesome, all-woman team members each received a box of Good & Plenty candy.

After the rigors of the competition, I was not allowed to rest, let alone rest on my laurels, as the former RC Emilie, now back to hostess Emilie, requested that I do service at the grill. I cooked up the pork tenderloins, brats, and chicken sausages under the watchful eye of Bill Highley and Tom Provasi with just plain old company provided by Barry Pangrle, from whom I learned an interesting tidbit about Portuguese Water Dogs (they were used to carry messages between fishing boats). I know my work was not entirely to the satisfaction of Bill & Tom, but the old maxim about heat and staying out of the kitchen was especially appropriate in this occasion and I confidently transported my product to the kitchen. Dinner was served and once again we were all treated to a fabulous smorgasbord of delectable dishes and good company as we enjoyed our meal.

President Vince Vincent served up the standard membership meeting while I prepared for my third and final labor of the evening as dessert chaplain to the LPR flock. Emilie had provided ice cream, half-a-dozen different toppings, assorted nuts, cherries, whipped cream, chocolate covered raisins and more for the final dish of the evening. As it was a Saturday night, we decided to call them saturdayes and I was to be the jerk who scooped up the dessert. Em had provided two tubs of ice cream and most of it went. Many of the flock came back for a second helping and some came for a third. I heard many a confession, most of which concerned lust... for chocolate, whipped cream, etc. My favorite parishioners had to be the Raddings. Bonnie came first and surreptitiously ate a saturdaye, saying she didn't want her daughter to see her because Lisa was trying to get her to eat a more healthy diet (her daughter even eats kale for breakfast, OMG!). A half hour later, Lisa came by, had a saturdaye and had a nice long chat with me that included a recipe for using fresh spinach for breakfast.

I could tell things were winding down when I began noticing ladies flitting around bussing things into the house, putting trash into bags, etc. So, I wandered over to the fire pit, where I found our host and hostess serenely surveying the rubble of a fabulous and festive good time. I chatted with Bill

Every sporting event needs an equipment manager, in this case, the prez himself, Vince Vincent.

& Em, Ed & Karen Tefankjian, the Mussers and others while my ever effervescent wife spent a half hour saying her goodbyes prior to taking our leave.

Thank you Bill and Emilie for this well envisioned and superbly executed event. The entertainment was a real hoot and your graciousness outstanding. Yes, it's true... you are both awesome!

Kevin Bennett dished it up for the ice cream saturdayes.

Suzette Pangrl; lookin' for some threes.

Team Olympus - looking awesome. Kevin, Diana, Chris, Jackie, Jen, Jim, Christina and Steve.

What is it about women and shoes? The second place team couldn't wait to get back to their own foot ware fast enough! Lisa, Suzette, Bonnie, Angie, Sue, Karen and Sandy.

Lisa and Bonnie Radding show off second place prizes... vintage candy!
